IN AMSTERDAM, every canal house has a story. At the Pulitzer Amsterdam (pultzeramsterdam.com), more than two dozen historic structures tell the tale of four centuries along the city's fabled waterways. Reopened this month after a 16-month renovation, the hotel—a maze of 17th- and 18th-century houses along the Prinsengracht and Keizersgracht canals—remains rooted in history, from its lobby adorned with antique oil paintings to its Dutch restaurant accessed through an old apothecary shop. Each of the 225 guest rooms is unique, blending such original elements as wood beams and marble floors with contemporary furnishings and textiles. For guests in search of a good story, the Book Collector's Suite (shown) includes its own private entrance from the canal-side walkway, a library stocked with vintage books, and plenty of nooks for enjoying a few selections. —PEGGY SUSWERDA

WINNING WAYS

The on-demand jet charter service Victor (flyvictor.com) is taking passengers beyond the runway with a series of new bespoke journeys across the globe. Launched in October, the company's Art of Curated Travel program first brought travelers to Havana with the outfitters Cuba Educational Travel, for insider experiences such as cigar and rum tastings with local experts. Victor has since taken travelers to Miami Beach's Scope Art Show for a series of VIP events and private showings with featured artists, and partnered with Elk Mountain Expeditions, which offers whitewater-rafting and fly-fishing outings on Aspen's Roaring Fork River. This November, the company will take passengers to Abu Dhabi and the Maldives via private jet and Etihad Airways' exclusive residences for a high-flying winter getaway. —JACKIE CARADONIO
