Flight MODE

When Karl Lagerfeld transformed the Grand Palais into Terminal 2C of the Paris Cambon airport for Chanel's spring/summer '16 show, he raised the bar on globetrotting style. Chanel Airways, departing from Gate No 5, demands paparazzi-proof sunglasses and a "Coco Case" (the new trolley bag). "We travel more and more. So why shouldn't there be Chanel luggage?" says Lagerfeld.

Functional, timezone-switching luxury fashion is now big business, with designers opting for a sharper, retro-tinged look. Prada showcases the appeal of the air-hostess skirt suit, while Gucci has revived the old-school monogram suitcase. Both could be straight off the pages of The Art of Flying (Assouline, £115). Perfect for today's jet set, who hail their private jets using Fly Victor, the app that can have you in the air as little as four hours later. Choupette can come too, thanks to their "pets on jets" policy.

PIECE OF HER HEART
Janis Joplin's tragically short life story makes for both cheering and heartbreaking viewing in Amy Berg's documentary, Janis: Little Girl Blue, narrated by Cat Power. With access to Joplin's most intimate letters, it's the ultimate celebration of her storming voice, sexual magnetism and flamboyant style. From February 5
